BASIC GOOD CLINICAL PRACTICE (GCP)

The Good Clinical Practice (GCP) guidelines are an international quality standard offered by the International Conference on Harmonisation (ICH). This common technical document's purpose is very simple, to protect subjects enrolled into clinical trials and to ensure the integrity of the data generated. Subsequently, all personnel involved in clinical research should gain a good understanding of the Good Clinical Practice guidelines.

In cooperation with the Coordinating Centers for Clinical Trials (KKS), the Vienna School of Clinical Research has developed an online course that guides you through the ICH GCP content in this easy to follow course, irrespective of your role or experience. This introductory course allows you to gain the necessary knowledge to conduct a clinical trial in compliance with the GCP guidelines, as well as the responsibilities of each of the roles set out by the guidelines. The duration of the course, depending on your own pace, averages 5 to 7 hours. The content is delivered over a series of eight modules, with the addition of interactive learning games and short quizzes allowing you to assess your understanding as you progress through the course.
